Pendergast Wins Bloody Campaign for Kansas City

Democratic "Little Tammany" Defeats Fusion Reform Ticket

FOUR SHOT TO DEATH

Pendergast Defeats Hill by 141,000 Votes to 81,000

KANSAS CITY, Mo.—(AP)—Big Tom Pendergast's Democratic machine rode through to an overwhelming victory Wednesday after a blood-stained election Tuesday marked by four killings, scores of sluggings and machine-gun terrorism.

The drive by the citizens' fusionists, led by Dr. A. Ross Hill, former University of Missouri president, to oust "Little Tammany" from control of the city government failed by a wide margin.

Hill received some 81,000 votes against 141,000 for the Democratic incumbent, Mayor Bryce Smith.

The election—dead were as follows: Deputy Sheriff Lee Flacy, 35, slain by invading gunmen near a precinct where there was a Democratic factional fight.

William Finley, Negro Democratic precinct captain, P. W. Oldham, bystander, fatally wounded in the fight involving Flacy and Larry Cappe.

Oldham and Cappe died Wednesday.

Jesus Knew Life in Little Country

For Palestine Was Typical of the World, Says Methodist Pastor

"It has been said that Jesus could not be a teacher for modern men because he knew so little of the world. He did spend his short life in a little country not much larger than one of our counties. But he knew man and he knew God. And when he speaks on either He is the supreme authority." Said the Rev. E. C. Rule, speaking at the revival service in Little Methodist church Tuesday night.

The theme of the evening sermon was "The Far Country," a continuation of a series of sermons on "The Prodigal." A large congregation was present for the service.

Speaking further on his theme, the pastor said:

"The scriptures say that we are made in the image of God. I believe that Jesus saw a capacity for goodness, for nobility, for great character in ordinary men. He gave His life under God for the realization of that God likeness. And the great business of our life is to realize that. We are here for the purpose of growing in a great soul.

"But the possibility of great heights means the possibility of great depths. Someone says, 'No known animal has such capacity for degeneration as man.' This young man faced away from God, and that road led down to the far land where pride and character and religion are all sacrificed.

"We get away from the good life by degrees, spiritual and moral degeneration come by small steps. One day a man who had slipped badly said to his good wife, 'Jennie, you are a fine woman, a good woman, you should have married a better man.' She answered, 'I did, James. How many feet are slipping by such small degrees that it will not be realized until some jolt comes that jays us awake.

"One characteristic of the 'distant land' is that our spiritual and moral ideals become atrophied. Petrified might be a better word. We still hold them and believe in them, but they lose all effectiveness in determining life's choices.

At 7.30 Wednesday night the series of evening sermons will continue with the third sermon on this parable, the special theme for the evening being, "Waste and Want." Dale Barnum and Mrs. John Cox will sing, "The Way of the Cross." Thursday morning the subject for the 10 o'clock service will be "The Gift of the Spirit."

U. S.-Jap War Means Ruin for Both

World War Cost Europe Its Trade Hirota Points Out

William Philip Simms Interviews Japanese Foreign Minister

U. S., JAPAN GAINED

Japan Wants Peace to Continue Her Gains in World Markets

William Philip Simms, noted authority on foreign affairs, famed as a war correspondent and specialist on the Far East has started his tour of the world for NEA Service. He will write several series of articles, on information obtained from the highest official sources, on the world situation as he sees it today. This article is the first of a series of five on Japan, in which he presents the Japanese viewpoint on the crises facing that nation, especially with regard to issues concerning the United States.

By WILLIAM PHILIP SIMMS (Copyright, 1934, NEA Service, Inc.)

TO KIOKI—(AP)—(P)—Between the United States and Japan, declared Foreign Minister Koki Hirota, in the course of a special interview at the foreign office, would merely play into the hands of other powers.

Neither Japan nor America would gain anything by conflict, he said. On the contrary, both would be utterly ruined, victor as well as vanquished.

The only gainers would be the other great commercial nations, which might profit by taking over the trade which the combatants would lose.

"The World War," the head of the Gaimusho went on, "ruined every great nation of Europe. On the other hand, the United States and Japan to a certain extent, temporarily benefited—as was altogether logical.

"As a result, Europe became a little less powerful, particularly of the United States. War between the United States and Japan would tend to even things up.

"The rest of the world would derive some benefit, perhaps, while our two countries destroyed each other. Japan and America, therefore, should see to it that this war talk gets nowhere.

No Clash of Interests
"Our national interests do not clash fundamentally at any point. They are, in fact, complementary rather than conflicting or competitive.

"Our principal export is silk, which you must have, but do not produce. We must have cotton, automobiles, and which you do not produce.

"It is true that Japan aims at a Monroe Doctrine of her own for Asia?" I asked.

"No," the foreign minister replied. "The Monroe Doctrine implies certain exclusive rights over some particular area and Japan makes no claims to exclusive privileges in Asia.

"I recently stated in the Diet that Japan, serving as the only cornerstone for the edifice of the peace of Eastern Asia, bears the entire burden of responsibilities."

No "Monroe Doctrine"
"By this I did not mean to imply a Japanese Monroe Doctrine for that quarter of the globe. Japan has no Monroe."

"I mean merely that Japan must have peace and order in East Asia and, therefore, is taking the lead in a job for the good of the entire world.

"What about your Manchurian policy?" I queried.

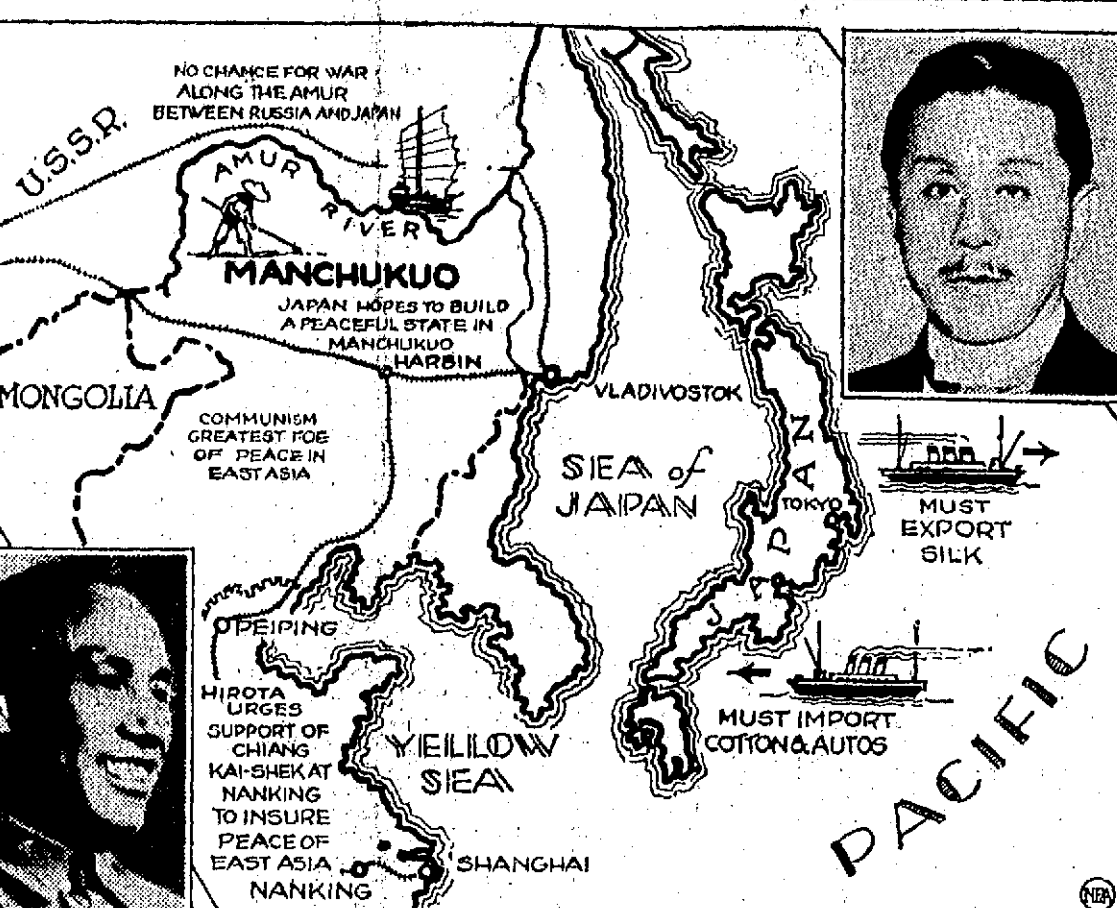

"In Manchuria we hope to help set up a model state. If by our help Manchukuo becomes peaceful and prosperous China. And such a China would be a boon to all civilization."

"Would Japan accept foreign cooperation in the job of reconstruction in the Far East?" I put in.

"Far from wishing to take on the pacification of East Asia alone," he answered. "Japan not only would welcome, but invites the co-operation of the United States, Britain, and other powers."

Favors Chiang Kai-shek
"What, for example, could America and Europe do, in a practical way, to advance the cause of peace, say in China?" I asked.

"Support Chiang Kai-shek," the foreign minister quickly replied. "The present Nanking government far from controls all of China. It is sorely beset on all sides by rebels, Communists, (Continued on page three)

Simms on Tour of World for N. E. A.

Noted War Correspondent Opens Japanese Series in Today's Star

To obtain for newspaper readers a first-hand, authoritative picture of the world situation today, William Philip Simms, foremost authority on foreign affairs, will tour the world for NEA Service.

He now is in Japan, from where he has dispatched his first series of five articles, and will proceed from Tokyo to Shanghai, Nanking, Peiping, Harbin, and Vladivostok, then leaving for Moscow and other European capitals.

Simms, born in Graftonville, Ga., Aug. 28, 1881, started his newspaper career on the Atlanta Journal, going to Europe with the Cincinnati Post.

He began his foreign service as Paris correspondent for the United Press in 1908, remaining there until the outbreak of the great war.

During the world conflict, he was a war correspondent in France, Belgium, Italy, and Russia. Simms was chief of the United Press bureau in Paris during the peace conference.

Returning to America, he was sent to the Orient in 1920 by the Scripps-Howard newspapers, returning to cover the Washington naval conferences as a Far Eastern specialist.

Simms is holder of the British war, British victory, and French Verdun medals. He is a fellow of the American Geographical Society and a member of the Academy of Political Science and the Ypres League.

Woman Arrested on Gold Hoarding

Shreveporter Refuses to Tell Where $2,500 in Coin Is Hidden

SHREVEPORT, La.—(AP)—Shreveport's first arrest for alleged gold hoarding, and one of the few thus far in the nation, was made here Tuesday when a deputy United States marshal served a warrant on Mrs. Mary Blanchard, charging her with hoarding $2,500 in gold coin.

Mrs. Blanchard, wife of A. G. Blanchard, oil appliance dealer, appeared two hours later in the office of United States Commissioner T. Overton Brooks and arranged $3,000 bond. The temporary bond is returnable April 9.

The government alleged that Mrs. Blanchard got the gold coin from the New Orleans branch of the Atlanta Federal Reserve bank, in December, 1932, and that she failed to account for its disposal.

On three occasions, government agents called on Mrs. Blanchard and requested her to detail disposition of the gold and each time she peremptorily ordered them to leave the premises. United States District Attorney Philip Meem said.

Guernsey Child Dies of Threhold Illness
An attack of whooping cough, measles and double pneumonia caused the death Tuesday night of Dale Ivan Harden, 7-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Harden of Guernsey.

The lad came to his death about 9 o'clock Tuesday night in Julia Chestnut hospital. Funeral and burial services were to be held Wednesday afternoon at Emanuel.

Martin Insull Is to Be Deported

But He Is First Being Returned to Chicago for Trial

DETROIT, Mich.—(AP)—The United States immigration service laid the groundwork for deportation proceedings against Martin J. Insull Wednesday and then permitted Chicago officers to proceed with him to Illinois where he faces charges growing out of the collapse of the Insull utilities empire.

Insull, who declared himself a British subject, was paroled to Chicago under an excluding order and will be turned over to immigration authorities for deportation as soon as disposition is made of the charges against him in Chicago.

Samuel Changes Ships
LONDON, Eng.—(AP)—A Reuters (British) News Agency dispatch from Athens Tuesday night said Samuel Insull had changed from the little Greek tramp steamer on which he left Greece more than a week ago to another vessel at the island of Rhodes, in the southeastern part of the Aegean sea.

The fugitive former Chicago utilities executive left Piraeus, port of Athens 10 days ago aboard the freighter, or Maiois to escape American authorities seeking his extradition on embezzlement and fraud charges. Destination of the second craft, which was not identified in first reports, was not determined.

The Maiois, however, was reported to be sailing for Italy. During the past week Insull had been in Egypt, having been on the alert in belief that the expensively chartered Maiois was heading for the Suez canal and some Red sea haven.

The daily Mail's Athens correspondence, on the other hand, reported that Insull had been offered a refuge in Yemen, a state in southwestern Arabia. He reported that Imam Yahya, sultan of Yemen, had offered him a refuge on conditions of his supplying the sultan's government with modern arms and ammunition for a war against Sultan Ibn Saud of neighboring Nejd, who is king of the Hedjaz.

The Athens correspondent reported that Insull was assured of unlimited hospitality at Sana, capital of Yemen, where "he would be strongly secured against attack by thick walls."

Friends and relatives of Sultan Yahya were reported as believing that Insull was considering the offer.

Roosevelt Puts to Sea for Vacation

President Sails From Florida Aboard Vincent Astor's Yacht

JACKSONVILLE, Fla.—(AP)—President Roosevelt sailed out to the open sea Wednesday for a week's vacation from the cares of office aboard the yacht Nourmahal, owned by Vincent Astor.

After one of his busiest days Tuesday the president set aside his time entirely to vacation freedom.

His jaw stuck out when mention was made of the house vote overriding his veto of the veterans' allowances bill, but he declined to comment.

Murfreesboro in New Legal Battle

Judge Assumes Responsibility for Dismissing Sheriff's Charges

MURFREESBORO—State Comptroller Griffin Smith appeared dramatically in a crowded courtroom here Tuesday to deny that his department had recommended or approved dismissal of embezzlement indictments against Sheriff Matthew D. Cummings of Pike county.

His denial and open accusation that Circuit Judge A. P. Sneed had been "brazenly imposed upon" by Prosecuting Attorney J. M. Jackson precipitated the following developments:

Judge Sneed explained that he had not been influenced in his dismissal of the indictments by the purported recommendations of the state comptroller and the attorney general.

Heated and flatly contradictory statements were made in open court by members of the comptroller's staff on one hand and Prosecuting Attorney Jackson and Attorney John Owens on the other. Owens was Cummings' lawyer.

Sheriff Cummings followed J. Bryan Sims, chief county accountant of the comptroller's office, outside the courtroom where they exchanged scolding epithets but were pulled apart before they came to blows.

The net result was that the situation remained unchanged as far as Sheriff Cummings is concerned, but the responsibility for dismissing the indictments against him was unequivocally accepted by Judge Sneed and Prosecuting Attorney Jackson, with whom it legally rested in the first place.

"Had I been influenced," said Judge Sneed from the bench when each side had had its say, "in my dismissal of the indictments by the purported recommendations of the state comptroller and the attorney general, and then had learned that I had been misled, I would not hesitate to reinstate the indictments."

"But since I realize that prosecution of criminal indictments is no concern of the comptroller or the attorney general, I gave no weight to the reported recommendations,

Governor Is Without Authority to Extend Tax Period, He Finds

LITTLE ROCK.—(P)—Attorney General Norwood held Wednesday with Governor Futrell that the governor has no authority to extend the time for payment of taxes or to waive penalties for non-payment.

Governor Futrell said he had been of that opinion for years, and would await action of the legislature in the future giving him authority in such matters before issuing proclamations.

The opinion was asked of the attorney general since requests have been made for some relief when the first installment of the tax-paying period expires the third Monday in April.

The governor pointed out that while he is without authority to extend the payment time or to waive penalties, collectors could accomplish the same purpose by back-dating their receipts.

City Auto License Put on Sale Here

Arkansas Machine Specialty Co. Manufactures 900 for City

The new 1934 city automobile license tags went on sale Wednesday at Hope city hall in the office of Charles Reynolds, city treasurer. The color combination is green and white, and the President Roosevelt's veto of the independent offices appropriation bill.

The tags were manufactured in Hope, the product of Arkansas Machine Specialty company, North Walnut street. This is the first time any Hope concern has attempted the task.

After completion of the Hope tags, the machine company received orders for license plates for the towns of Gordon and Fordyce. Plates made for Hope numbered 900.

Cost of the tags will be $2.50 for the year ending December 31, 1934. Mr. Reynolds urged automobile owners to bring motor numbers and license number of the state tags.

Owners may purchase license until May 10 without penalty. Tags sold last year numbered 813.

Junior Play to Be Presented Friday

"My Irish Cinderella" Will Be Given at Hope City Hall

"My Irish Cinderella" will be presented Friday night in city hall auditorium by members of the junior class of Hope High School. The play is directed by Miss Miriam Carlton.

The production, taken from the stage play of the same name, was written by Cecil Spooner and Charles Blancy. To be given Friday night at 8 o'clock.

The high school orchestra, under direction of Mrs. John Wellborn, will furnish music. Other musical numbers will be a girl's trio. A boy's quartet also is on the program.

The story is built around a grandfather, who in order to fulfill his dying son's wishes, orders a search to locate his granddaughter whom he has never seen.

Mr. Wingate, a nephew, (Abner Harvey) aids in the search for the purpose of marrying the lost heiress and collecting a large reward. He found a girl named Peggy that fitted the description. She was sent to the grandfather's home as a substitute for real granddaughter.

After amazing revelations Peggy is found to be the real heiress, and is in love with a young American aviator (Nolan Cargile) instead of the English Man Wingate.

Geneva Higginson plays the part of Peggy. Paul Jones is cast in the role of grandfather. The cast has 11 characters. They are: Mother McGee—Sue Ellen Jones. Peggy—Geneva Higginson. Geoffrey Carewe, the Earl of Lonsdale—Paul Jones. Earl Wingate—Abner Harvey. Clifford Morgan—Nolan Cargile. Margaret—Wingate. Sibyl Burton—Annie—Mary Agnes Redwine. William—Clement Broomfield. Mansfield—Willard Anderson. Workman—Ray Turner. Newsboy—E. P. Young, Jr.

A Thought

And the Lord said unto Noah, Come thou and all thy house into the ark: for thee have I seen righteous before Me in this generation.—Genesis, 1:1. If men would take the chances of doing right because it is right, instead of the immediate certainty of the advantage of doing wrong, how much happier would their lives be.—B. R. Haydon.

Attack Is Led by Cutting, Supporter in F. D.'s Campaign

Independent Republican Urges Senate to Override President

VETS' PAY IS ISSUE

Administration Battling to Save Plans for Balanced Budget

WASHINGTON.—(P)—The debate was opened in the senate Wednesday afternoon by Senator Cutting, New Mexico independent Republican leader who supported President Roosevelt for election, with a plea for the upper house to override the president's veto of the independent offices bill.

It is this bill which contains liberalization of veterans' allowances, on which the house overrode the president's veto Tuesday.

A two-thirds vote is needed in the Senate to make the bill law without the president's signature.

Democratic leaders hoped to muster a small majority for the president.

Bankhead Vote Delayed
WASHINGTON.—(P)—A final vote on the Bankhead cotton bill was blocked in the senate Tuesday by a last minute parliamentary jam, after the measure had been loaded down with amendments both serious and ludicrous.

Half a dozen times a final vote was about to be taken, only to have another amendment offered and finally the decision was postponed when administration leaders forced adjournment for the night to prevent action on President Roosevelt's veto of the independent offices appropriation bill.

The veto message now has precedence over the cotton bill, which probably will mean another day or two of delay on the Bankhead measure. Leaders forecast a close vote.

A long string of amendments added to the bill at the suggestion of opponents included stringent limitations which friends of the measure feared would destroy its usefulness, and a couple designed to ridicule the legislation.

The latter, offered by Senator Gore, Democrat, Oklahoma, changed language permitting the secretary of agriculture to make regulations for carrying out the law to give him power to "enact such penal statutes" as might be necessary.

Friends of the legislation knew they could remedy these in conference with the house, but were more concerned over the serious limitations.

John W. Ridgill to Run for Clerk

Hope Man Candidate for County Probate Office in August

John W. Ridgill announced for the office of county and probate clerk, subject to the action of the Democratic primary election next August, in The Star's political column today.

Mr. Ridgill is so well known that he needs little introduction. He was reared in Bodaway township, Hempstead county, and came to Hope as a young man. He worked through two fall seasons for J. H. Haynes' grocery store and then entered the mercantile business.

He is thoroughly qualified and if elected pledges himself to make the county an excellent county and probate clerk.

Mr. Ridgill announced that he would highly appreciate the public's vote and influence in this as he has in the past.

BEHIND THE SCENES IN Washington

Mitchell Admiral Feud Still Flashes
Doorkeeper Loyal Bitter at
"If You Want Better Cheese,
FSRC Has It... No Limit on Senate's Joke Resolutions

BY RODNEY DUTCHER

NEWSPAPER Correspondent
WASHINGTON.—General Billy Mitchell and the navy's admirals still love each other like hyenas. It was hinted up, but the House subcommittee's inquiry into naval aircraft purchases was marked by a hot skirmish between the rambunctious Billy and supercilious Admiral S. J. King, chief of naval aeronautics.

King answered Mitchell's statement alleging inefficiency by recalling Mitchell's court-martial conviction, accusing him of exaggeration and propaganda, and saying his charts were subject to suspicion.

Mitchell's quiet rebuttal said King had very little air experience; he was qualified to speak as an expert, and had no service in aeronautics in war.

Committee members, spurred by naval officers who may have noticed Mitchell's visit to the White House to discuss aviation, tried to keep the rebuttal out of the record.

McFarlane of Texas insisted it stay in the incident ended when King met Mitchell in MacFarlane's office and gracefully apologized.

Loyal to the Last Punch

Harry Parker's loyalty to the House Ways and Means committee is matched only by the committee's loyalty to him. Harry is its portly 70-year-old colored doorkeeper.

Thirty Howard (colored) University students entered the Capitol to protest the House restaurant's ban on negroes.

"Go way from here," Harry yelled as they were being ushered out and shoved one, which started a fight.

Harry has been with the committee since William McKinley was chairman. He's so influential that last year when he complained that he didn't see enough people passing by on the first floor, the committee moved its offices to the busy second floor.

Better Cheese? Try FSRC
The FSRC (Federal Surplus Relief Corporation), buying and distributing relief foods, is producing better cheese than you can buy in the average grocery store.

And the excellence of FSRC cheese, according to disinterested people here who have sampled it, is matched only by the taste of FSRC smoked hams. The reason: Department of Agriculture experts, who spend their lives with such problems as the best way to make cheese or to cure hams, tell FSRC what to require in its requests for bids from producers.

No Limit on Senate Jokes

"Resolved, That the whiffenpoop shall be the national bird and the delphinium the national flower."

Would the Senate consider such a resolution if offered by a member? It would have to. Under the rules, any resolution introduced must come up quickly to the floor.

And although it soon may be buried forever with some committee, any member then may talk on it as long as he likes.

That explains why Nye and Norris were able to convulse the Senate with Nye's resolution that regular Republican senators Dickinson, Davis, McNary, Hebert, Kean, Keyes, Walcott, and Hale be appointed a committee to investigate Republican charges that the St. Lawrence treaty betrayed American rights in treaty interests to Canada and that they annul the Republican secretaries of state under whom the treaty was negotiated—Hughes, Kellogg, and Stimson.

Norris, veteran insurgent, arose as "a conservative Republican and a believer in party regularity," to oppose a resolution which would increase party dissension and might drive those eight G. O. P. senators out of the party.

Robinson of Arkansas, Dickinson, Harrison, and Lewis also spoke. But then the question rose: How do you get rid of such a resolution?

Nye, admitting there was no standing committee to which it might be referred, bowed to the Norris plea and asked unanimous consent to withdraw it.

But Borah objected. After further colloquy, Nye insisted on withdrawing it "because we are not into such shreds on this side of the aisle." And Garner ruled that he had the right despite Borah's objection.

YOUR CHILDREN

By Olive Roberts Barton
Avoid Disillusioning Children About Their Young Playmates

Before a mother orders her child to stop playing with certain of his young companions in the neighborhood, it would be well to read what Olive Roberts Barton says on the subject. It comprises another of her articles on Child Training.

Probably every mother in the world sighs when she has to divide her boy or her girl with others.

How nice it was when she could have them at home with her all day long. They were getting along so well and understood each other so perfectly.

She feels that no one will ever understand her Jimmy or her Jean well enough to do them justice. Not only that, but she fears the adverse influence of those less well-trained.

But just because she does feel this way it is the best thing for all concerned that life steps in and removes her darling from an existence in which he is king. The child needs a certain amount of struggle, or at least effort, to develop the best in him. He has to have some roughage to give him fibre. We all know that so it is not news. But just the same a mother cannot help feeling that she could do so much better than any one else.

These Outside Friends
It isn't the teacher she is jealous of, although in some cases, a mother will set her face directly away from this other woman who supplants her for a good part of every day, but it is children.

When Jimmy shows a tendency to want to be out playing every minute and uses her only for background, she will probably make a greater effort than ever to endear him when he is alone with her. These things take care of themselves. Children need love and lots of it, but a certain attitude toward his outside friends is always vital.

There's Tommy Green, for instance, who is pretty selfish and loots Jimmy every chance he gets. Or there is Dickie Brown who has an obsession for caps and takes her Jimmy's as well as all the others he can get hold of and throws them over fences for their owners to retrieve at some little trouble.

Mother's Orders
Her first instinct is to say, "Don't you play with those boys, darling. They're rude and rough and I don't like them."

"But I like them, mother." You are so trusting that anybody could walk away with your nose and you wouldn't care. Just stay away from them. Hunt new friends. I won't have you imposed upon."

In time Jimmy loses faith, too. He goes by what his mother says, and hunts another crowd. But what happens here? Here's Harry Smith who dares him to do things and then laughs when Jimmy won't or can't, and perhaps there's a Billy Somebody who is forever making a running jump and engaging some boy or other in a rolling match on the sidewalk.

If your Jimmy is a Jean, the same things happen in girls' crowds, too. Not in the same way, but in a dozen little unpleasant happenings that run parallel to the masculine methods.

A Child's Attitude
There are times when interference is necessary, to be sure, times when things go so far that a child needs a little championing and protection. But for the most part it is well to allow Jimmy or his sister their precious faith in their friends.

Besides, the darlings may just possibly be giving as good as they get. Our children are not angels just because they're ours.

Children have a way of accepting and even expecting a certain mistreatment from other children, so they "emote" less about them than we do. They take things pretty philosophically and usually forget the little meannesses (as we think of them) as soon as they're over.

If we baby our Jimmy, he'll soon be tagged as a sissy and short sport. But for him to lose faith and confidence in people is worse still.

NEXT: The shy child.

The ROMANTIC RUNAWAY

by KATHARINE HAVILAND-TAYLOR

BEGIN HERE TODAY
PABLITO, a handsome youth, nervous, a fugitive when for his circumstances beyond his control, he made himself on his way to Cuba some BEAU and LOTTIE, two thieves.

He had killed a man and stolen a famous string of pearls. Pablito does not know this at that he himself has been accused of the crime which took place at the Florida home of wealthy Mrs. F. J. P. Pablito, a young man, she loves him. PABLITO, a young man, she loves him. PABLITO, a young man, she loves him.

Now GO ON WITH THE STORY
CHAPTER XXIV
ANGELA hobbled back to her shack and packed her belongings. There was scarcely more to do than to slip a bottle of gin in the front of her dress. This done, she hobbled forth again. She would go to the swamp for a little while, she decided. She did not wish to encounter the inquisitive strangers again. Picturesquely she cursed them. If their coming should disturb the monthly remittance from Cuba for caring for Pablito what would become of her?

She wept, whining vituperation and curses as she went. At the edge of the swamp she pulled her sagging skirts high and waded cautiously, a wary eye out for alligators and water moccasins. Again on land, she followed what was called the "Slave's Way" because years before many slaves had followed this route, seeking freedom.

When she stepped into the first clearing she jumped so that a twinge of rheumatism made her wince. Someone else had sought the shelter of the swamp—a man. "Good day, mother," he said easily. He, too, looked startled. He hoped she had not noticed this but she had seen it and smiled shyly. "It is a good day for a picnic."

"Will you share my meal?" he asked. She nodded as she sat down on a hummock not far from him. Then she studied him. Soon when she felt it to be wise—she would return to Key West and tell the authorities that a man was hiding in the swamp in a spot to which she could direct them. She would do this, providing she could benefit by it. The probability of her benefiting she would make sure of before she spoke.

"You seek the solitude?" she asked blandly. The man stirred, looking anxiously toward the shadows. "I am hunting orchids," he answered. "Ah!" she thought, with an inward leer. "So you're hunting orchids! Already you look as if the dogs had chased you 100 miles."

He spoke a stiff variety of Spanish and she concluded that he was a northerner who had long been in hiding.

"God grant that you find your orchids!" she murmured, her blood-shot eyes fixed upon him.

She was certain now. The man was hiding from something or someone. And she would have her reward.

Above them the trees grew unusually high for swamp ground, making an impenetrable green-black roof. Now and again a leaf stirred gently but usually quiet prevailed.

"It is a warm day, stranger, and you have hurried," she said with a thick pretense of concern.

"Yes—" he admitted. He took from his pocket then a gray handkerchief that Pablito had once kept white for him. With it he mopped his brow.

PABLITO sent a messenger, a Cuban youth, to the small island but the messenger could find no trace of Noyes. Storms had left sand thick and gritty upon everything within the shack, the Cuban boy testified, and the place looked as though it had been deserted for months.

"Nadie allí!" he repeated with a lift of the shoulders and outflung hands. "Nadie!" ("Nobody there, nobody!")

"And you went into the swamp?" Pablito asked, his hand muscles strained and tense as he leaned forward over the bare-topped table.

The boy hesitated a moment. Then he spoke. He had gone into the swamp, he reassured his conscience. Not far, to be sure, yet he had gone into the swamp.

"Seguro que si, Señor!" He answered. ("Surely yes!")

Then he wiped his brow although the day was not over-warm, being freshened by a cool breeze that had had its start in a late, northern blizzard. That swamp, the Cuban boy feared, he would never forget. The place had been as black as the inside of the devil's cauldron. Half way toward its darkest gloom he had come across a wicked old woman who had seemed a witch.

She was lying on a path with one leg twisted under her and she had screamed as he had never heard a woman scream.

He had backed away from her, asking bawlingly, "Old woman, can I help you? May I send friends to you from Key West?"

SEENING her, he had decided that, sin or not, he could not touch her! And she had answered, shrieking, "No, no! Not from Key West! I have a daughter who will come to me. Go!"

Ah, her troubles! Angela thought through the pain that confused her. Help from Key West would deliver her into the power of the strangers who had inquired about the boy left in her care.

The orchid hunter would help her, she knew. He had the soft eyes which deny an enjoyment of torture.

"Go, stranger and with God!" she repeated between her groans. So the Cuban boy had gone after one last glance toward the darkness of the shadows and after crossing himself.

Pablito, in the house of Cerro, sank back in his chair, his brow furrowed. He had grown older in a very short time. He was still sure that some day, some how he would locate Noyes and that again they would dwell in that peace he now thought of as close to Utopia.

He arose to pay the messenger and the boy, reassuring himself of the fact that he had been in the swamp, went on his way.

Lottie appeared then. "Too bad, honey," she said, laying a hand on Pablito's shoulder. He realized that the only sincere kindness he knew these days came from Lottie. He thought, "Some time, in some way, I must repay her."

NORMA FIELD and Estelle had settled in Tucson, Ariz. Norma, knowing that she could not live long, clutched the hours with Estelle fanatically.

Estelle sat by her mother's bed constantly, watching with tragic young eyes and smiling stiffly.

"Darling, you should get out more; you should get more exercise."

"But I'd rather be here," "I'm afraid it must be stupid for you, dear, panned up with me."

"I want to be here, mother," Estelle thought a great deal during those days. She thought of the past and of what was ahead. She had begun to understand her father through his attitude about Pablito.

He had been ruthless in refusing to listen to her defense of the boy. He would be kind, she realized, so long as he had his way and wholly cruel if antagonized. She feared the years when she must be alone with him.

"Are you comfortable, mother?" "Quite, dear heart—"

But her mother spoke slowly now with long gaps between her words and always there was the flush of fever on her sunken cheeks and the brightness of it in her eyes.

Norma Field died in October. The day was Estelle's sixteenth birthday, a day when the mountains were tinged with pink and gold and purple and the air was sparkling.

She had never seemed better. Estelle had laughed with her that morning over some trivial happening that had amused them both. Then Mrs. Field had said she wanted to rest and Estelle had gone to the garden to look at the mountains, the changes of which never failed to entrance her.

She returned at luncheon time to meet the day nurse. "Dear, don't come in now!" the nurse ordered sharply. Estelle grew faint but the nurse did not stop to help her. She hurried back to her patient.

"Big" Field came soon. Estelle had not cried and did not cry until she saw her father. Then she clung to him, weeping hysterically. She felt his heart rise. She would be his now—all his.

"Never mind, darling. You have your daddy," he said soothingly, patting the girl's shoulder. He felt her clinging to him more tightly.

and bandits. If Chiang Kai-shek fails, there is no telling what will happen. "You mention Communists. Are they led by Russia?" "I do not believe the Chinese of today would repeat the mistake of Sun Yat-sen and put Russians in charge. But that does not matter. The result is the same whether Chinese communism is inspired from abroad or by conditions of want and misery at home.

"In either case the answer is chaos, and chaos in China is a menace to world peace."

Discounts War Rumors "What are the chances of war breaking out along the Amur between Japan and Russia?"

"Japan has no intention to attack Russia, and I do not believe Russia intends to attack us. So there should be no war."

"Russia has sent a considerable number of troops to the Manchukuo-Siberian border. And that creates a certain uneasiness. But I don't think it will lead to anything."

"What do you think China's position would be in a Russo-Japanese conflict?"

"The present belief at Nanking is that China stands to profit by peace more than she would by a general Far Eastern war, in which she might take a hand."

"Nanking now is convinced that an understanding with Japan is more to her advantage than conflict."

Hints at Shrewd Stroke

This statement is extremely significant. Throughout the Far East I have discovered a well-defined belief that China's strong man, Marshal Chiang Kai-shek, has reached an understanding with Nippon and there is even talk of the possibility of the Manchukuo government recognizing

Should this happen, of course, it would put an entirely new face on the question of recognition by other countries. Refusal to extend recognition after China had done so would place them in the position of being "more Catholic than the Pope."

Whether Japan withdraws from the Washington naval treaty unless given parity with the United States and Britain, the foreign minister said, has yet to be officially decided.

Personally he does not favor withdrawal, but he repeated, that is only his private view.

Exclusion Still Sore Spot Japanese exclusion from the United States, he admits, still causes much bitterness in Japan. It is far from a forgotten issue.

But Japan's position is that, after all, it is an American domestic problem which, sooner or later, America will settle of her own accord in a way which will remove the sting of Japanese pride.

Foreign Minister Hirota is widely regarded as one of the most discerning of Nippon's present-day diplomats and statesmen. Before assuming his present office he was ambassador to Moscow.

NEXT: 1935, the critical year for Japan, when naval parity, the League of Nations, and ownership of the South Sea Islands will be at issue.

Former Partners Shoot Each Other

One Dead, One Dying as Result of Forrest City Store Duel

FORREST CITY, Ark.—Two former business partners met in the store where they once had worked together late Tuesday and, without saying a word, both pulled guns and opened fire.

When the firing ceased L. E. Davenport, aged 65, was dead and A. B. Wolfe, 55, was lying on the floor, unconscious with two bullet holes through his head. Physicians have no expectation that he will live.

The only witness to the duel to the death was Henry Waterman who was an original partner of the two men when they started the mercantile business there two and one-half years ago and who remained a Davenport's partner when Wolfe left the firm. Waterman said that the battle started so suddenly and to him, so unexpectedly, that he was unable to describe it clearly.

He said that he and Davenport were alone in the store about 6:30 when Wolfe entered and the two men opened fire, apparently simultaneously. At least, Waterman was unable to say which fired first.

To Let Airmail in Next Three Weeks

Temporary Contracts for 3 Months—Corrupt Bidders Are Barred

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—Temporary contracts for commercial air lines to transport the mail for three months will be let within the next three weeks. Postmaster General Farley announced Wednesday.

Farley said that no company whose contract had been annulled for fraud or collusion may bid for a temporary contract.

Bids will be invited for contracts for temporary service over 15 routes, including the 1750-mile route from Boston to Fort Worth, including stops at Memphis, Little Rock and Dallas.

Feed Production on Idle Acres Urged

But It Must Be Used on Farm—Livestock Sale Restricted

Farmers who have signed a cotton contract are permitted to plant some of their rented acres to feed crops where there is a shortage of feed on the farm, according to Frank Stanley, county agent.

The production of feed however, is limited to that grown and consumed on the farm. Mr. Stanley pointed out, as feed grown for sale either directly, or indirectly through the sale of livestock is not allowed.

In advising farmers to grow feed on rented acres, Mr. Stanley explained that the first thing to be determined is whether there is a need for more feed and if there is a need, the next thing to determine is the crops to be grown. Hempstead county is naturally adapted to the production of some crops better than it is to others. Legumes are especially productive on most of the soils while the yield of such feed crops as corn is unusually low in some sections, especially the hill sections.

It is well to remember in deciding what crops to grow, that crops particularly the clean cultivated crops like corn, furnish feed only, while other crops such as legumes and pasture plants not only furnish feed, but build up the fertility of the soil as well.

Cowpeas, soybeans and lespedeza belong in this class. These legume crops often surpass corn as producers of feed in some sections of the county. Instead of just planting feed crops irrespective of their adaptability, the practical thing to do Mr. Stanley explained is to plant the crops that will yield the greatest amount of good, cheap feed, and that will leave the soil in an improved rather than an impoverished condition.

El Dorado Lions in Quarter-Finals

Win Second Game at Wichita, Kan., by Big Score

WICHITA, Kan.—(AP)—The El Dorado (Ark.) Lions advanced to the quarter-final round of the women's National A. A. U. basketball championships late Tuesday with an overwhelming, 41 to 10, second round triumph over the Independence Christian Church Brownies of Kansas City.

The game was rough and hard fought despite the disparity of the score. The Arkansas team led by 16-6 at the end of the first half and by 28-8 at the three-quarter mark.

Gammill accounted for 16 of the Lions' points and Mann, whose brilliant center-jump and under-basket play was the feature of the game, made half a dozen goals for 12 points. The outclassed Kansas City team trailed throughout and yielded possession of the ball many times on pass interceptions. The Lions broke up the opposition pass game and presented a smooth passing attack themselves.

Howard Co. Singing Meeting April 7

Convention at Nashville Is to Be Held for Two Days

NASHVILLE, Ark.—The Howard County Singing convention will be held here April 7 and 8 at First Baptist church. The Saturday program will consist of music and a short business session. At this time the place for the fall meeting will be selected. Sunday the entire day will be spent in singing. Some of the best singers of this part of the state are expected to be present. Many quartets will be featured on the program. Lunch will be spread in picnic style at noon Sunday. The public is invited.

O. G. Powell, president of the Howard County Singing convention, Tuesday issued an invitation to all Hempstead county singers through a letter received here by Wash Hutson.

Scanning New Books

BY BRUCE CATTON

Davy Crockett is one of those legendary figures from the day when America was young and the commonplaces of frontier life were like the inspired dreams of a romantic novelist.

Most of us know little about him, but he's worth getting acquainted with; and Constance Rourke's new biography, "Davy Crockett," provides an excellent introduction.

Crockett grew up in the raw new lands of the south and west a century ago. He served under Andrew Jackson in that doughty warrior's Indian campaigns and in the War of 1812. He was the most famous hunter-man of a whole nation of great hunters; he was a leader in a community of self-reliant men, and he died, finally, in the great fight of the Alamo.

He was, in other words, a very notable figure in pioneer history, and Miss Rourke has written a very interesting book about him.

She not only has told the story of his life accurately and clearly; she has recounted the legends that gathered about him, and in so doing has recaptured the flavor of those lusty and salty days of long ago.

Davy Crockett, they used to say, could dive deeper, stay down longer, and come up drier than any other frontiersman; he could stand three bolts of lightning without dodging; once he treed a bear, and the bear looked down and recognized him and

New Will Rogers Film at Saenger

"David Harum" Amusing Story of a Famous Horse-Trader

Today at the Saenger theater, Fox Film will present the request of thousands of theatergoers and present Will Rogers in "David Harum." The constant demand of the public urging Rogers to play the role of this famous character of literature virtually forced the Fox Film officials to forego any other plans they might have had for the comedian. The film which is based on the novel by Edward Noyes Westcott is reported as being perfectly suited to Rogers' talents.

the typically American theme of the novel, concerns itself with the life of a shrewd and ruthless horse-trader. His dealings with the people in the small town in which he lives are cold hearted and unethical. But a young man who is employed as a teller in the bank owned by the horse-trader, learns of his concealed sympathy for the poor, and realizes that underneath his hard crust he really has a soft heart. Because of his poor financial standing, the boy hesitates to propose marriage to a wealthy girl with whom he is deeply in love. The horse-trader's efforts to help the romance are unsuccessful. Upon the advice of the horse trader, the young man places all his money on a horse the young girl has entered in a race. The film is said to come to a happy and an amusing conclusion, as the horse-trader uses his own hilarious method to bring the horse across the line a winner.

Will Rogers' supporting cast is studied with an array of screen personalities that includes among many others, Louise Dresser, Evelyn Venable, Kent Taylor and Stepin Fetchit.

Talk things over with your Mirror!

Step into your room, stand in front of your mirror, and have a heart-to-heart talk about your personal appearance.

Look at your suit! How about those shiny spots on the elbows? How about that frayed edge? And how "dated" is the style?

If you are a business man you can't afford to underestimate the business value of your personal appearance. Particularly when a new suit costs so little!
